

LEE STONE'S DRESSING FOR SPECIAL WORK

Capt. Lee Stone, who has been honorably discharged from the United States army after having served 20 months, has been appointed on the staff of Surgeon-General Rupert Blue, of the United States public health service. He will assume his new duties Jan. 1.

Dr. Stone is a physician in addition to being a sociologist of national reputation. He trained 500,000 men of the United States army in the science of proper living, and a number of whom service proposes to have him carry the gospel of clean living that he has been preaching for the last two years into civil communities.

The public health service will wage war on the social evil and hopes to awaken the public conscience to the realization of the dangers of secret diseases.

"Men who have been serving their country here and abroad and are in perfect physical condition must be kept so," declares Dr. Stone. "No army has even been in such moral and bodily vigor. Soldiers have been trained to see the necessity of keeping fit to fight and therefore will refuse, when discharged, to longer countenance immoral practices that were common before war was declared."

The army has won a great victory and civil communities must do likewise in their fight for the perfection of a new race that is to "carry on" after the present generation has retired to earn the rest that always follows in the wake of a fight for justice," Dr. Stone explained.

It is possible that Capt. Stone will be called on to assist the state and city health departments in their efforts to wage war against social diseases.

AMUSEMENTS

"Romance of Tarzan"

It does not require an overabundance of the customary spirit to enjoy the weird, fascinating and certainly unusual story which Edgar Rice Burroughs has given to the world. Now has its expression on the screen as evidenced at the New Lyric Wednesday afternoon and night.

In "The Romance of Tarzan" which is the attraction at the Madison avenue playhouse for the remainder of this week, the task of transplanting Tarzan from the picturesque jungle and his companions into the savagery of modern society's elements, is attendant with most spectacular results.

Those who saw "The Romance of Tarzan" enjoyed every minute of the seven parts which are required for the unfolding of the final episode of the story of the ape. The plot has been devised which details the life of Tarzan in the primitive jungle, and which is carried into the savagery of modern society.

The experiences of an ape man, reared among denizens of the African jungle when he essays conventional life, are oftentimes amusing, not to mention spectacular. But the film patron and the literary student who has read or seen "Tarzan of the Apes" will revel in the interesting romance as unfolded in this picturesque film.

The elaborate scenic effects which made "Tarzan of the Apes" stand out as alone in films of its type, are again to be seen in "The Romance of Tarzan" with the added comedy of a glimpse into ultra-society circles as known in England. Here Tarzan discards himself in a startling manner at times, but his athletic prowess does not detract from the beauty and charm of his romance.

Elmo Lincoln is again seen as Tarzan, Miss Ethel Markey as the girl and Cleo Madison essays the role of the vampire who nearly wrecks the romance. All in all, "The Romance of Tarzan" forms a fitting conclusion to Burroughs' gripping story that will long remain one of the most unique bits of literary and film amusement.

Loew's Lyceum.

Variety vaudeville, coming under the caption of an all-star bill, will be offered for the last three days of the week at Loew's Lyceum. The program has been sent here as a Christmas week attraction and in fact the bill is made of the happier vein of vaudeville numbers, beginning with the chief character of the program, the comedy duo of Hickey and Hickey, who are two original comedians of musical comedy which they present in two different styles. Wastika and Understudy, an exhibition of what highly trained acrobats can do will complete the vaudeville end. The film star will be pretty Ethel Clayton in her latest release, "Woman's Weapons."

"Common Clay"

Seats were placed on sale this morning for the opening engagement of "Common Clay," the great New York dramatic success which will be the attraction for Thursday at Loew's Lyceum. In this absorbing narrative of a man's rejuvenation Reid is first seen as a drunken loafer who is shanghaied to a lumber camp in a picturesque country. He is unmercifully beaten by the camp boss, and this before the eyes of the girl who begins to love him mentally and physically, and he comes back in a different man, a new "Common Clay." "Hide and Seek Detectives," is the added feature.

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE BEDTIME STORY

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE TIN SWORD.

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

BY HOWARD R. GARIS.

The day after Christmas, when Uncle Wiggily Longears, the bunny rabbit gentleman, had eaten so much roast carrot stuffed with lettuce that he was sure he wouldn't be hungry again for a week, that day he started out from his hollow stump bungalow to take a walk.

"Where are you going?" asked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, his muskrat lady housekeeper.

"Oh, just to look for an adventure," replied Uncle Wiggily, and he had no more idea of what was going to happen than you have.

"I guess I'll stop and see Grandfather Goosey Gander," said Uncle Wiggily to himself. "I wonder if he had as nice a Christmas as I did?"

Then he hoped on over the fields and through the woods until, pretty soon, he heard a voice saying:

"Come on, now! March fast! Forward, march, my soldiers! We must charge on the enemy and win a big victory."

"My goodness me, sakes alive and some cranberry sauce!" thought Uncle Wiggily. "I seem to have run into a war all at once. I must be careful."

So he looked through the bushes, and there he saw Johnnie and Billie Bushytail, the squirrel boys, and Curly and Poppy Twisttail, the piglet boys.

The animal chaps were all dressed up in soldier suits and hats, and they were playing soldier. Uncle Wiggily, the squirrel boy, was the captain, leading them, and waving a sword over his head.

"Hello, Uncle Wiggily!" called Billie, as he saw Mr. Longears peeping through the bushes. "We're playing soldier! Come on, play with us and have some fun."

"Thank you, I'm sorry, but I can't," said Uncle Wiggily. "Some other time I may, I'm on my way now to see Grandfather Goosey Gander."

Then Mr. Longears waved good-bye to the soldier boys, and they marched away through the woods. The bunny rabbit gentleman followed more slowly, leaning on his red, white and blue striped crutchstick, for he was suffering some pain and had to go slowly.

All of a sudden, as Uncle Wiggily walked along he saw something bright and shining lying on the snow in front of him. He picked it up and saw that it was a sword.

"The same toy sword that Captain Billie Bushytail was playing soldier with!" thought the bunny. "He must have dropped it as he marched along, and then he forgot about it. I'll keep it with me until I see him again."

And then there in the woods all alone, where no one could see him, Uncle Wiggily waved the toy tin sword over his head and he softly cried, as his pink nose twinkled: "Charge on the enemy! Come on, soldiers!"

"Ha! It makes me feel quite like a boy again to have a toy sword, such as I used to play with," thought the bunny.

Then he went on and on through the woods, his way to see Grandfather Goosey Gander, carrying Billie's toy sword with him.

And then, he had not gone much farther before, all at once, as he came to a big mulberry bush all covered with snow, he heard a voice call:

"Hold on, there! You've gone far enough. Stop right where you are!"

"Who?" asked Uncle Wiggily, surprised like. "Who is to stop?"

"You," was the answer. "I've been waiting for you. Now I have you, and I think, though it's a little late, that I will have some cause for my Christmas dinner. I've been waiting for some ever since yesterday."

And then, out from under the bush, jumped the old old Pipitewah.

"Oh, dear!" thought Uncle Wiggily. "What shall I do? How can I stop the Pipitewah from taking some off my ears?"
